The 4th Annual DRIVE-IN Film Festival returns to the Delsea Drive-in

The DRIVE-IN Film Festival will bring a slate of fresh independent films to the Delsea Drive-in on September 24, 2011.

The DIFF is not-for-profit organization that partners with Drive-ins across America to bring independent film to communities that aren't served by art house cinemas.

This season, the DIFF is bringing the animated family film, Mia and the Migoo, starring Whoopi Goldberg, Matthew Modine, and Wallace Shawn, about a young girl on the search for her father, and the creatures she meets along the way. Also screening this year, is the film The Company Men, starring Ben Affleck, Tommy Lee Jones, Kevin Costner, and Chris Cooper, and directed by John Wells, the television icon responsible for ER and The West Wing.

The Delsea Drive-in is one of only 150 Drive-ins operating in the United States. With two screens showing double features, a fabulous concession stand, and with an $8.00 ticket price, it's a fun affordable night out for the entire family – half the price of the multiplex. The DIFF likes to create a carnival atmosphere, free games for the kids, and fun raffles for the adults.

Drive-ins are such a classic piece of Americana and the DIFF's goal is to celebrate them and support the Drive-in owners.
